Stony Brook University to Host the Fourth Annual “Giving Day” for its Community

Stony Brook, NY: Earlier today, Stony Brook University announced that its fourth-annual “Giving Day” will take place on April 27, 2022. It is an event where the Stony Brook community, including alumni, faculty and staff, students, parents, patients, and friends, comes together and lend its support to programs across the campus over the period of 24 hours.

With a gift goal of 3500, Giving Day allows participants to donate through their official website and to spread the word through the participants’ social media. Anyone who have donated will also be listed on the website, and whoever contributed the most will be become a champion on the leaderboard.

A few notable funds out of the estimated 90 programs that are participating in this year’s 24-hour drive are: Stony Brook Fund for Excellence, Computer Science Development Fund, LGBTQ* Center Fund for Excellence, and many more.

In 2021, the community raised nearly $500,000 to more than 90 Stony Brook University and Medicine programs. This year’s Giving Day will provide the much-needed support to Stony Brook’s faculty, students, athletics, and patients.

In response to last year’s Giving Day, the President Maurie McInnis said, “The Stony Brook community’s overwhelming response to Giving Day reflects a deep commitment to helping others and building a better world. I am inspired by the sense of compassion, optimism, and resolve I see every day on our campus.”

Stony Brook University and its community’s support for this event shows that they care about every little thing and are willing to take the initiatives to support them.
